One of the most neglected virtues of the Twentieth Century is courtesy. We who claim to be Christians should cultivate this virtue and be examples to others in our practice of it.

If you have any doubt about the scripturalness of this subject, read with me from I Peter 3:8. "Finally brethren, be you all of one mind, having compassion one to another, love as brethren, be full of pity, be courteous."

Courtesy should cover all areas of Christian living. The place to begin is in the home. The husband who is rude and vulgar to his wife or children can't expect to please the Lord. Parents who fail to show love and courtesy to their children can't expect their children's love and obedience. Children who are rude and ugly to their parents can't please their heavenly Father.

This same courtesy should be extended to all with whom we come in contact. It is said of Daniel Webster that on one occasion he met a servant who bowed to him on the street. Mr. Webster in return bowed to the man. His companion was amazed and said, "You mean you would bow to a servant?" Mr. Webster's answer was, "Do you think I would allow anyone to be more courteous than I?"

Let us be courteous one to another.
